

Is it supposed to snow in Val Thorens in the next few days? I'm planning a vacation mid-November

11:08:43 PM

According to current weather data for Val Thorens:

- Now: -7°C with light snow.
- Sun 26 Oct: Light snow showers, ~2 cm.
- Mon 27 Oct: Snow showers, ~10 cm.
- Tue 28 Oct: No significant accumulation.
- Wed 29 Oct: Minimal snow.
- Thu 30 Oct: Snow, ~4 cm.

Daytime highs rise to 5–6°C midweek, so expect mixed conditions despite fresh snow early in the period.

For mid-November: it's too early to forecast precisely. Val Thorens usually aims to open in late November (sometimes mid-Nov if conditions allow), but early-season reliability varies. If you're set on mid-Nov, consider flexible bookings and high-altitude options (Val Thorens itself, or nearby snow-sure areas like Tignes).

Want me to keep an eye on the forecast and ping you with updates as your dates approach?

Will mid-November work with a budget limit of 7000 ILS per person? (include flights, hotel and ski-pass)

Sorry about the glitch. Here's my response:

According to current exchange rate data, 7,000 ILS \approx €1,834 per person.

Will that work for mid-November in Val Thorens (flights + hotel + ski pass)?

- Yes, if you go with a budget/mid-range setup (self-catered apartment, shared transfers, Val Thorens-only pass, and a low-cost flight). Expect roughly €1,100–€1,500 per person.
- It may exceed the budget if you choose a 3*+ hotel, 3 Vallées pass, and pricier flights, which can land around €1,800–€2,200 per person.

Typical mid-November cost ranges (per person):

- Flights (to Geneva/Lyon): €200–500 if booked early; higher if late.
- Transfers to Val Thorens: €120–200 (shared/bus options).
- Lodging (6 nights): €250–500 in a shared self-catered apartment; €700–1,200 in a mid-range hotel.
- 6-day ski pass: Val Thorens–Orelle roughly €300–360; 3 Vallées roughly €360–400 (early-season deals/dynamic pricing may lower this).
- Rentals (if needed): €80–130.

Notes:

- Mid-Nov is early season; terrain may be limited but prices can be softer. Val Thorens typically opens around late November; if your dates are earlier, flexibility helps.

If you share your departure city, exact dates, and preference (apartment vs hotel, VT-only vs 3 Vallées, need rentals/lessons), I can price a concrete itinerary and check current deals.
